I WILL NOT MESS WITH THE OPENING CREDITS

Nobody likes taking out the garbage, and Homer is no exception. But when he gets into a fight with his garbage men, he decides to run for the sanitation commissioner of Springfield, a position currently held by Ray Patterson (Steve Martin). A good slogan, some witty remarks, and an appearance at a U2 concert are more than enough to buy the town's votes, but spending the whole annual budget within one single month might cause a few problems.

U2 guest star. Paul McGuinness and Susie Smith guest voice. This was the 200th Simpsons episode aired on Fox.
Interviewed in the 1997-07-28 edition of USA Today, Simpsons executive producer Mike Scully declared: "I thought it had all the elements of what The Simpsons does best: corporate satire, political satire, a production number, a great story with Homer, and the family is involved. It seemed to represent a lot of what we do, so I decided to hold it until May."

Die Kugel der Isis
I AM NOT THE NEW DALAI LAMA

It’s the last day of the Isis exposition at the museum, and nothing could stop Lisa from seeing it. Nothing aside from an emergency involving Bart, a faucet, and some glue, that is. . . But when Lisa tricks Homer into letting her take the bus and ends up lost in the middle of nowhere, her father must use whatever trick he knows to find her.

Treehouse of Horror IX
The Simpsons Halloween Special IX
Das unheimliche Mord-Transplantat

Three more tales of horror this year:
Hell Toupee – Homer is possessed after a scalp transplant from Snake, the recently-executed convict.
The Terror of Tiny Toon – Bart and Lisa get zapped into their television, chased by homicidal Itchy & Scratchy through Live With Regis & Kathie Lee and other programs.
Starship Pooper – Homer and Marge appear on The Jerry Springer Show to contest Maggie’s paternity.

Plenty of other guest voices in here: Jerry Springer, Ron Howard, Ed McMahon, Regis Philbin, Robert Englund, and Kathie Lee Gifford.
Here is an except from a press release regarding this episode: While McMahon and Springer give voice to animated drawings of themselves, Philbin and Gifford are featured in live action within the episode—a first for the series. Although a 3-D Homer was dropped onto a live-action street in Hollywood at the end of 1995’s episode 4F02 Treehouse of Horror VI, he did not interact with any of the live-action actors and was computer-generated, rather than via the standard cel-generated animation. Treehouse of Horror IX marks the first time The Simpsons characters have interacted with live-action actors.
This episode is reported to feature the last appearance of Lionel Hutz, voiced by the late Phil Hartman.

When You Dish Upon a Star
Kennst du berühmte Stars?

Homer discovers the trials and tribulations of keeping Hollywood secrets to himself when he lands a job working for celebrities.

Guest stars: Kim Basinger and Alec Baldwin.
From the 1998-10-05 edition of People Weekly, page 59: On an episode of The Simpsons set to air in November, Homer winds up in bed with Alec Bladwin and Kim Basinger after he crashes through their skylight during a parasailing mishap on Lake Springfield. (The actors like to vacation in Springfield they tell Homer, to escape the phoniness of Hollywood.) After reading the script, Alex and Kim happily agreed to the parts since they're big fans of the FOX animated sitcom. There's a funny scene about the cartoon Kim's habit of overpolishing her Best Supporting Actress Oscar for L.A. Confidential. "They thought the script was hysterical" says executive producer Mike Scully, adding that there's also a joke about Baldwin punching out a tabloid photographer, a reference to his legal troubles after he allegedly hit a lensman trying to videotape his wife with their newborn daughter. (Alec was acquitted of the misdemeanor battery charge.) "Kim might have laughed a little harder at that one."

Viva Ned Flanders
Wir fahr'n nach ... Vegas

Discouraged by sixty years of minding his P's and Q's, Ned Flanders asks Homer to reveal the secret of his intoxicating lust for life. But Homer's plans to put the spice back into Ned's brio go haywire when they land the pair in wedlock with two grubby casino cocktail waitresses.

Guest starring The Moody Blues.
Matt Rose was lucky enough to visit Film Roman's studios during work on this episode: Ned for one reason or another takes a hard look at his life and decides he hasn't got out and actually done any "living". One of the animators told me that Ned is revealed to be a bit older and much stronger than we think he is and they show him doing one-armed push ups. Homer drags Ned to Las Vegas where they get very drunk, marry two cocktail waitresses and have to spend the rest of the episode getting out of it. One scene I remember being drawn was the Casino, which was a dead rip on Caesar's Palace.
